TRUSTEE FRANK MCGINITY is graciously opening his home and gardens for this special event. Mr. McGinity's home is located in the Theatre House, one of only three original structures that remain on the McCormick's Riven Rock Estate.

THE RIVEN ROCK ESTATE was owned by the McCormick family (Cyrus McCormick of International Harvester who invented the reaper which revolutionized farming). The 84-acre property was purchased in 1896 and in 1898 a large two-story Mission Revival home was built. The estate's name came from an oak tree near the main gate, growing out of a large boulder. Stanley McCormick, the youngest child of Cyrus McCormick and husband of Katharine McCormick, lived there, confined for much of his life as he suffered from schizophrenia. His life was the basis of T.C. Boyle's 1998 novel Riven Rock.

FOLLOWING the 1925 Santa Barbara earthquake, the main house was demolished. A few years after Stanley McCormick's death in 1947, the estate was sold, then subdivided into 34 smaller parcels.
